The Unsent Project: Unlocking Hidden Emotions At the heart of our project lies the understanding that words can be powerful tools for catharsis, connection, and empathy. We invite individuals to share their unspoken emotions through anonymous submissions, fostering a community built on shared experiences and mutual understanding. Born from artist Rora Blue's vision, we started by collecting unsent text messages addressed to first loves. Today, our online archive resonates with people worldwide, capturing the essence of love, loss, and everything in between. Our mission is to provide a safe, anonymous platform for individuals to express their unspoken thoughts. We believe that sharing these unsent messages can be therapeutic and eye-opening, releasing emotions and finding closure. Through our archive, we connect people from all walks of life, demonstrating that no matter where you are or what you've experienced, you're not alone in your feelings. Each message is a story, a glimpse into someone's heart, reminding us that love, heartache, and longing are universal experiences. We invite you to explore our archive, searching for specific names or browsing through countless submissions. Whether you're here to share your unsent message or find comfort in the words of others, we hope you'll discover what you're looking for. You can still see the original message even after editing it. If you send an edited message to someone using an older operating system, they'll receive the updated message with the phrase "Edited to" followed by the new message in quotes. On the other hand, SMS, MMS, or RCS text messages cannot be edited or unsent. However, these types of messages can be edited in group conversations as long as there's at least one other iMessage user involved. To unsend a recently sent message, you have up to 2 minutes after sending it. Simply open the Messages app on your iPhone, touch and hold the message bubble, then tap Undo Send. A confirmation note will appear in both conversation transcripts - yours and your recipient's. The unsent message is removed from their device as well. You can also edit a recently sent message up to five times within 15 minutes of sending it. To do so, open the Messages app on your iPhone, select the conversation with the message you want to edit, touch and hold the message bubble, then tap Edit. Make your changes and tap to resend them or revert to the original message. Note that when you unsend or edit a text message, you must be using iMessage with iOS 16, iPadOS 16.1, macOS 13, or later. If you unsent a message to someone using an earlier operating system, they'll still see the original message. You can edit a sent message on iPhone by going to Messages app within 15 minutes of sending it. Hold the message bubble, tap Edit, make changes, then resend or revert. The edited message is marked as such and both parties can view previous versions. Additionally, Unsent Project allows anonymous sharing of unspoken emotions through letters, promoting catharsis, connection, and empathy among people with diverse feelings.
